Georgia DNR brings snake education to Doll Mountain Campground at Carters Lake

Doll Mountain, Chatsworth - 6/12/26- Georgia's native snakes have developed remarkable adaptations for surviving in the Blue Ridge Mountains. In fact, Georgia is home to over 45 native snakes! Don't worry; only 6 of them are venomous, yet all are unique.

Join FIND Outdoors at Carters Lake's Doll Mountain Day Use Area for an up-close, family-friendly educational experience in partnership with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

From 11:00 am to 2:00 pm on Friday, June 12th, Campers and visitors are invited to stop by and witness live native snakes, all while enjoying a day at the stunning Doll Mountain campground. Visit to learn about the curious world of these reptiles, such as why some have green-tipped tails when young, while others are only venomous to amphibians.

Special thanks to our Georgia Department of Natural Resources partner for making this program possible.
